PBA and IBMA Join Forces For Chuck Pezzano Scholarship Fund

by Frank Weiler

LAS VEGAS — Next week the International Bowling Media Association (IBMA) will conduct it's annual meeting at this years International Bowl Expo at the Mandalay Bay Hotel and Casino. At that meeting Frank Weiler will present a check for $150 to IBMA President KEITH HAMILTON for the Chuck Pezzano Scholarship Fund. The money was raised as a result of bowling ball donations from PBA (Professional Bowlers Association) stars PARKER BOHN III, LIZ JOHNSON and WES MALOTT.

Last December the PBA World Series of Bowling was a success at every level. Great organization, great preparation, great competition, great performances and great memories. TOM CLARK and his crew are consummate professionals who know how to conduct a fabulous tournament and did so.

Behind the scenes at the World Series an effort was underway to raise money for the IBMA Chuck Pezzano Scholarship Fund. Scholarship committee member Frank Weiler met with Bohn, Johnson and Malott and obtained autographed balls which were used to solicit and obtain donations for the Pezzano Fund.

The Chuck Pezzano Scholarship Fund is named and dedicated to the memory of Chuck Pezzano, the Dean of Bowling Writers. Mr. Pezzano was a sports columnist for the Patterson, New Jersey Morning Call

Vazquez Wins PBA50 Northern California Classic for First PBA50 Tour Title

Weber's Consecutive Win Streak at Four Ends

BRENTWOOD, CA – Noel Vazquez of Sacramento, Calif., won the PBA50 Northern California Classic presented by MOTIV Wednesday for his first career PBA50 Tour title and in the process ended Pete Weber's record run of consecutive PBA50 Tour titles at four.

Vazquez, who has won two PBA regional and six PBA50 regional titles, defeated Weber 255-224 in the title match at Harvest Park Bowl.

"I'm shocked and at a loss for words," said the 56-year-old Vazquez. "To bowl against the greatest bowlers in the game is unbelievable and something you only dream about."

Vazquez, who qualified third for the finals, took an 11-pin lead in the fifth frame and then threw five consecutive strikes which were too much for Weber, who was the finals top qualifier, to overcome.

General Manager Sherry MacKenzie, Champion Noel Vasquez and Proprietor Jim Wangeman

"I just had to keep thinking to stay within myself and make the shots I'm capable of," Vazquez said. "You bring your "A" game and win or lose you can take satisfaction that you did your best."

"I'm pretty goal oriented," Vazquez added. "That's what helped me win my regional titles and it helped me get this win. I've always kidded my friends that if I won a national title I'd retire but I'm rethinking that right now."

Vazquez's previous best PBA50 Tour finish was 11th in the 2015 Suncoast PBA Senior U.S. Open.

Weber, a 37-time winner on the PBA Tour, which includes a record-tying 10 majors, was trying for his ninth career PBA50 Tour win. His streak of four wins started with the UnitedHealthcare Sun Bowl In The Villages in April which was followed by wins in the Mooresville Ford Open, Johnny Petraglia BVL Open and his second consecutive Suncoast PBA Senior U.S. Open win.

"My hat is off to Noel," said Weber, who is the defending PBA50 Player of the Year. "He broke the streak by bowling great and deserved to win."

Vazquez reached the title match by beating Ty Dawson of Sunnyvale, Calif., who was also making his first finals appearance,

Elite Bowler Rick Stine Rolls a Powerful Number but There's a Surprise to It

by Fred Eisenhammer

WINNETKA – After Rick Stine blasted seven straight strikes to begin his first game last Tuesday, he called his hot start “unexpected” and “abnormal.” Unexpected and abnormal?

Isn't this the Rick Stine who has clocked 18 perfect games and five 800 series?

Isn't this the Rick Stine who has crushed an 845 series? Isn't this the Rick Stine who blasted a perfect game at age 18 just six months after taking up the game? Well, yes, but he accomplished all those feats right-handed.

Stine changed things up last week in the “Guys and Dolls” league at Winnetka Bowl by bowling with his off hand. Stine, a 53-year-old Porter Ranch resident, does this from time to time to increase the enjoyment of the game – though his teammates sometimes encourage him to stay right-handed where they surmise he can bolster his team best with his stratospheric 230 average.

So Stine, who is uncommonly modest, will be bowling the “Guys and Dolls” summer session as a left-hander. And he provided a thrill last week by scoring a left-handed personal best 257 in his first game. Stine, a smooth-rolling machine as a righty, finished with a stirring 615 series left-handed by tacking on games of 203 and 155.

Marveled teammate Ellie Koops: “He does the same thing but as a left-hander. He's a mirror image of what he does as a right-hander.” Stine, who also bowls with teammates Marc Jay and wife Tracy Stine, rolled a rather pedestrian 465 series (left-handed) the previous week – the league's opening week of the summer. So his series improved exactly 150 pins as he boosted his team to three of four points for the week.

“It's for fun now,” Stine said. “I know what I can do right-handed and sometimes I just want to find out what I can do left-handed. It's an excitement generator for me. It's fun when you do well. I want to see if I can bowl above 185 [for an average] and use my knowledge as a right-hander and transfer it left-handed.”

Told he did a pretty good impersonation of Bryan Alpert, the national United States Bowling Congress ambidextrous record holder and manager of Corbin Bowl, Stine laughed.

“He's crazy [good]. He's skilled,” Stine said. “He can absolutely roll the ball. It would take me years to impersonate that. It's part of his blood. You have to have a passion to be as good as he is.”

Stine, a “Guys and Dolls” favorite because of his low profile despite a high average, makes it clear he is definitely not ambidextrous. He's just out to have a good time.

“My fear is embarrassment – on the way to the line, I'll drop the ball or roll it in the gutter,” he said.

Stine added that scoring a 257 left-handed was a definite highlight for him.

“I just felt like I had a lot of luck,” he said. “I felt really fortunate. That's what makes it exciting. A 257 is really a big number for me. I likely won't achieve that again. “I was doing my best not to fall down at the line. It was fun to watch the ball travel to the pocket. Every single ball was an adventure. Getting the first seven [strikes] was like winning the lottery. As much as I'd like to attribute it to skill, it was not quite that.”

Here Are Some More Amazing Feats

by Fred Eisenhammer

Want to talk more about a “Dutch 200” game – a wonderfully freakish occurrence in which a bowler alternates strikes and spares en route to a 200 game?

I didn’t think so. That topic has pretty much been covered with four recent stories in the California Bowling News. So we’ll avoid any more talk of a “Dutch 200.” Or all the “Dutch 200” record holders.

But one of the fun parts about bowling is that so many memorable events and moments can take place at any time. And one doesn’t have to be Pete Weber or Walter Ray Williams Jr. to achieve such a feat.

Here are some distinctive performances culled from the United States Bowling Congress record book:

- Can you believe a player bowled a record eight consecutive duplicate games? How is that possible? Yet, Stan Kodish of Toledo, Ohio, turned the trick in one day in 1988. He kept shooting a 202. The next highest is six by Lawrence Buller of Corpus Christi, Tex., in the 1992 USBC Open championships. His score was 180. Simply amazing – for both of them. Talk about being in a rut.
- Californians are scattered throughout the USBC record book. Bill Bunetta of Fresno holds one of those marks for being the oldest person to roll consecutive 300 games. He did it on Oct. 25, 1995, and he was 76 years old.
- Staying on the subject of age, Gene Scala of Jericho, N.Y., holds the men’s record for being the oldest league bowler. He earned that mark by participating in his league in 2012 at age 107. A Californian is tops when it comes to the oldest women’s league bowler. Maude McIntyre of Fresno was 103 during her league competition in 1993.

Many of the USBC records are listed as unofficial, but it still gives bowlers a level to chase. The USBC website can be found at bowl.com.

Records and recognition: It’s something that bowlers can shoot for regardless of age and skill.

Bowling Gets a Shot in the Arm With Increasing Recognition

by Fred Eisenhammer

WINNETKA – Something remarkable is taking place in the world of bowling. Perhaps you’ve noticed.

It seems the taunts, the barbs and the snubs directed at bowling have abruptly stopped. In its place is admiration for the game that is the most popular participant sport in America.

All of a sudden, there is recognition that bowling is an integral part of Americana – and has been for a long time. It’s being appreciated and respected seemingly in never-before-seen fashion.

Suddenly, this game that virtually anyone can play is being universally saluted. The raves have been coming from everywhere. This esteem is being manifested in movies, books and songs – all paying tribute.

It’s funny, but it seems as if was just yesterday that Hollywood icon Susan Sarandon took a below-the-belt potshot at bowling in an effort to promote her newly opened world-wide ping-pong social clubs.

Remember her acerbic comment?
Talking about the virtues of ping-pong, Sarandon said her game stood apart from bowling because “you don’t have to wear someone else’s shoes.”

That was not a soulful thing for Sarandon to say. No doubt, she heard about it. Since then, she hasn’t said a cross word about bowling. Perhaps she realized that both sports could flourish at the same time. Perhaps she realized that bowling wasn’t going away. Perhaps she feared a bowlers’ boycott of her future movies.

Whatever the case, what we’re seeing now is not a stream of putdowns but an ocean of applause for bowling.

Everywhere you look, someone is paying respect to the game.
Last year a critically acclaimed movie, “Sex, Death and Bowling,” popped into people’s radar and got its share of viewings. This was a comedy-drama with a moving story and a first-rate cast of Adrian Grenier, Selma Blair, Drea de Matteo and Mary Lynn Rajs kub.

Handkerchiefs were needed for this emotional and sentimental movie with a bowling setting. Who would have thought that bowling could create such emotion?

Even the publishing world has paid homage. Just recently, a novel called “Midnight Bowling” was released that spins a coming-of-age story with bowling as the backdrop. Quinn Dalton’s book bestows honor to bowling’s past and the lure it’s held on people’s lives.

The music industry has noticed too. Bowling got a plug (perhaps unwanted?) from a song with this inane title: “I Don’t Know Whether to Kill Myself or Go Bowling.” The ditty earned a spot on many lists for the “best of worst country-western song titles.”

It seems all at once people have come to acknowledge that bowling has a magnetic appeal that tightly bonds friends and family.

If you want to view bowling at its finest, watch the team of Laura Coury, Ann Egan, Jaye Rettedal and Stacey Tarantino in action this summer at Winnetka Bowl. Their team is known by the amusing and provocative name of “Girls With Balls.” The four bowlers are longtime friends who have been crashing the lanes on Tuesday nights for summer league play for more than a decade.

After spending nine months away from the sport, they come back and knock down strikes like it’s child’s play. Their enthusiasm is genuine; the fun is unmistakable. They’re the loudest ones on the block.

Those who watch can’t help but find their emotion infectious and irresistible.
There’s no doubt: More people are paying notice that bowling is going places and has an honored past. The sport has won new appreciation.

There are no turkeys in this game – unless it’s those three straight strikes that bowlers are piling up.

BURBANK — I hope all the bowling fathers and fathers of bowlers had a great Father's Day! Remember in this heat wave, not only do you want to stay hydrated and cool but so does your equipment. Especially those bowling balls, people.

Extreme temperature changes can cause serious damage to your ball so don't leave them in your car trunk.

Have a great week and stay cool!

newspaper for over sixty years.

He was the newspapers lead sports columnist writing five lead columns and three bowling columns a week. His bowling columns were extracurricular and done voluntarily. Chuck wrote about bowling when he didn’t have to but because he wanted to. He did so because he loved our sport.

He also was a great bowler. He was a professional bowler who was a charter member of the PBA in 1958. He served as PBA Historian for decades and was elected to the PBA Hall of Fame in 1975. The PBA Media Room is named in his honor.

Chuck Pezzano was special. Special for bowling. He was one of very few full time sports columnists who wrote about bowling and bowlers. Most city newspaper columnists have no interest in bowling. Chuck was different. He took every available opportunity to promote the sport of bowling. He was and still is a bowling icon, one of a kind.

Mr. Pezzano was a charter member of IBMA, a professional organization whose members represent all aspects of communications that cover bowling. In short, IBMA is bowling media. Members are artists, authors, bloggers, broadcasters, cartoonists, columnists, commentators, copy writers, graphic artists, illustrators, photo journalists, publicists and writers. IBMA is the successor of the former BWAA (Bowling Writers Association of America).

About the Pezzano Scholarship Fund. Every year IBMA awards up to three scholarships totaling up to $3,000 to deserving students. The scholarships are reserved for college age students with GPAs of 3.0 to 4.0 who are bowlers and involved in communications including electronic and print media, public relations, radio and television.

I would like to offer my sincere thanks to Parker Bohn III, Liz Johnson and Wes Malott for participating in this event. They were very gracious and cooperative during the World Series while under a great deal of pressure to perform on the lanes and earn a living.
